COMMENTS

- Resin Marble™ was chosen as the existing tiles weren't the right fit for the restaurant's makeover and new tiles weren't considered because the owner wanted to avoid grout lines and "open up" the space. The floor also had to be easy to clean as the restaurant had sliding partitions that were fully open during business hours.
- A custom copper design was used to bring out the colour of the wooden furnishings (including a spectacular overhanging tree feature) and help create a traditional Japanese feel with a modern twist. A semi-gloss polish was also applied over the finish for easier maintenance.
- Installation was carried out in a busy shopping and dining precinct, so a product free of pungent odours and dangerous solvents was a priority.
